Trail was at the Ken Weber Conservation Area at Cascade Brook (managed by the Smithfiled Conservation Commission). Rumors of virgin territory.

Running late I arrive to the sounds of on-on in the woods, some chalk talk, and a T trail arrow. No E trail arrow to be seen. I generally like the eagle trail but didn't really have time to mess around trying to find it. This was a good choice as apparently it just went uphill on a paved road to a X or YBF or such.

The terrain was delightful despite the wet leaves. There were a lot of twisty trails with lots of splits. I came across this little box twice having been turned around.

The twisty splitting trails led to lots of funny false - including one where one could see multiple marks of trail from the X. The checks were well marked but it was still easy to get misdirected. Pack had moved on from the W at a chimney.

I finally reached a false but could see pack so I just went to them. Despite my progress (a couple briars but nothing impassible) I was urged to retreat and follow trail. Finally I gave in and trusted them. Lies lies lies - I should have just persisted.

Out trail included some rock climbing by JTT and the largest natural waterfall in RI. Matches the state in stature.

In circle Shemale tried to assault LB but was held back. Nonetheless I was assigned hash shit.

1.4 mi including out trail

132 ft elevation gain

Lots more trail to be hashed here. On-On
